Travelling by road

Routes through London are complex to describe depending on which side of London you are approaching from. Head for Central London, cross the river if necessary to the south side of Lambeth or Vauxhall bridges and head for Vauxhall Cross. From Vauxhall Cross, approach Ponton road from Nine Elms Lane, which is at the first set of traffic lights along Nine Elms Lane heading west. Alternatively you can use either a number 44 or 344 buses which run along Nine Elms Lane.

By train

There are two railway stations nearby, Battersea Park (trains to and from Victoria) or Vauxhall (trains to and from Waterloo). There is also an underground station at Vauxhall (on Victoria line). All have regular services to a variety of destinations.
